Special Event on May 4th 2013

Zoltan Kövecses (Eötvös Loránd University, Budapest, Hungary) as a guest of the city of Poznań will give a lecture within the Academic Poznan series.

The theme of the conference is "Metaphor, metonymy and emotions". The conference aims to advance the study of metaphor and other related language and thought phenomena, including metonymy, and their relation to emotions, seen as one of the core elements of humanity, which play an inherent role in shaping real world issues. The conference encourages multidisciplinary and international research and collaboration by fostering an open approach with regard to theoretical frameworks, research methods and research contexts.

The programme will combine regular 20-minute presentations, a themed hands-on session, a poster session, and a PhD project – response session (presentations plus feedback). We are inviting abstracts for:

- regular 20-minute papers
- posters
- PhD project presentations (which should present PhD research work, with focus on data and methods)

Abstracts should be no more than 300 words (excluding references). Accepted PhD proposals for the PHD project – response session will have to be expanded to 2-3 thousand words to be presented to the discussants. The date for the submission of these expanded versions will later be announced. The language of the conference is English. All submissions will be reviewed by an international scientific committee.

Abstracts should be submitted via the online submission system EasyChair. Please follow the instructions on how to create a new user account. Once you are registered, you will be able to log on, create your abstract, modify it as necessary, and submit it.

The deadline for all abstracts is extended till 31 January 2013. Notification of acceptance decisions will be sent by 25 March 2013. Registration is now open – please visit our website for details concerning the registration process and abstract submission at raam2013.wa.amu.edu.pl.
